The Revival.

There were 34 seekers at the altar at the Rev. Harrison revival at the Union Methodist meeting last night, and of this number about 8 professed conversion. The vast congregation remained in the packed auditorium throughout the interesting services, which were wholly in charge of the "boy preacher," who is as active today as he was when he came to Decatur over four months ago. To-night's service will commence the 19th week of the revival, and it having been announced that the meeting would close on April 11th, no doubt many of the serious ones will improve the few days remaining and seek salvation.

At the session of the council last night the committee reported in favor of granting the Citizens' Street Railway Company the right to build a street car track on Eldorado street, from Front to North Water, and thence south on Water to East Main street, and the report was adopted by a vote of 7 to 3—a good, heavily majority. The report in full may be found in the council proceedings in another column. This action meets with the hearty approval of the new street car company, and no doubt very soon the new line will be built and operated by D. C.
Shelbarger, John B. Shelbarger, W. L. Ferguson, J. H. Brayton and A. E.
Kinney, the incorporators of this company. It is intended to make it a first-class line in every respect.

FARMERS from different parts of the county in the city to-day report that the recent rains and snow have brought out the winter wheat splendidly, and that fields that looked had a short time ago now look green and promise more than the fields in the county will yield largely, and that the croakers will be surprised accomplished hostess, and Misses Belle Burrows, Hattie Hardy, Jessie Stevens, Hattie Howell and Althea Priest, Messrs.

nounced myself an independent candidate for city clerk. Thankful for past at the ensuing April election, I am,

AN important improvement on the grounds of the Decatur Furniture Company will soon be visible to the naked eye. For several years the company has been in need of storage room for furniture, and it has been determined to put up this season a two-story brick building, 40 feet wide and 100 feet long, which will be erected on the ground west of the factory. The new building will be built on a line with the factory, flush with the sidewalk lengthwise. The furniture will be packed up and stored in this new building ready for shipment.

We have received a copy of the Daily Gate City, of March 22d, published at Keokuk, Iowa. It contains an announcement of the death of John Corwin, aged 83, who a number of years ago was a resident of Decatur. His son John was a printer in the old Gate City office, and another son, George Corwin, was at one time employed as a tinner at Morehouse, Wells & Co.'s store. The funeral occurred at Keokuk.

OPERATIONS at the Decatur woolen mill have ceased for the present. The superintendent, Mr. Van Biper, intends going on the road in the interest of a manufacturing firm in the south. It is not known when the wheels at the factory will be set in motion again.

The Illinois watch factory band, of

"Tolansie"
This charming opera will be first presented in Decatur by the Ford Company on Monday evening next. "Tolansie" is an opera in many particulars unlike the other productions of its celebrated anthors. It is a sweet-toned, melodious opera, the instrumentation is particularly fine and the concerted vocal numbers are deliciously sweet, while the humor is rich and sensuous, and "like the perfumed air laden with the music of the spheres." The argument of the opera is expressed in one word—it is a satire upon the English House of Lords, and the libretto is in Gilbert's usual pungent and fascinating vein, and proves of sufficient interest to keep the action observed in every detail, and presents a series of Poers and Peris that come as pleasant strangers.

The characters are each en rapport with their audience, and the opera moves before the people with remarkable smoothness. The sale of reserved seats for the opera has commenced at Curtis' jewelry store.

JOHN R. DUFFIN'S FATE.

The Jury Gives him 12 Years in the Penitentiary for Forgery.

The trial of Hamlet Shakespeare Felton, better known in Decatur as John R.
Duffin, came to an end at Belleville yesterday, and the jury gave him 12 years in the penitentiary on the charge of forgery. The following particulars of the closing features of the trial are from the Globe-Democrat of to-day:

The trial of H. S. Felton, for forgery, was given to the jury at Belleville about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The interesting part of the proceedings came when the defendant took the witness stand and explained how the signatures to the note were obtained. He said they were genuine but procured through fraud and misrepresentation. He then proceeded to detail how he did it. In the course of business with the gentlemen whose names were attached to the note, he frequently had to get their signatures to papers. In the case of Mr. Winkler he represented that a certain mortgage which he held against Mr. Schmidt, and which had been paid, had not been released, and it would be necessary for him to execute a release first. The witness for this purpose had printed up an office in Lebanon release deeds of his own, the lower lines of which were worded and arranged in language similar to that on the bottom part of the note in question. He represented to Mr.
Winkler that the release deeds had to be in duplicate. Mr. Winkler signed one and then signed what he thought was the duplicate, but what was in reality the note. Said the witness, in conclusion:
"That was the last business transaction I had with Mr. Winkler."

In the case of Jacob Schmidt, Felton secured his signature by representing that an attachment bond was necessary in a suit that he was conducting for him. Instead of legal being signed, however, he substituted the note and Schmidt affixed his signature to it. The note was pasted on the bottom part of the bond, which had been shortened so as to accommodate it, as the line of connection between the two papers was skillfully concealed with a blotter.

According to Felton's story Mr. Padfield's signature was easily obtained. A receipt had to be signed by him and the note was presented to him, but Mr. Padfield did not happen to have his spectacles with him and couldn't examine it. Felton said he read the receipt to him and then laid it upon the desk to be signed, but while Mr. Padfield was getting ready he substituted the note instead, with a blotter placed over the under half of it.
Mr. Padfield still complained about not having his spectacles with him. Felton continued: "I then loaned him my glasses and with my finger pointed to the line for his name. Padfield was a poor penman, and would have scratched his name all over the note if I had not fairly held his hand."

This closed the evidence, and arguments of counsel followed. State's Attorney Holder opening in behalf of the prosecution. His address consisted of a review of the evidence from beginning to end. He was followed by Mr. E. L. Thomas for the defense in an able speech. The latter was in turn succeeded by Capt. R. A. Halbert, also for the defense. The defendant addressed the jury in his own behalf, and his speech was, as anticipated, clear, brilliant, and at times very eloquent.

Mr. C. P. Knapp made the closing argument on behalf of the people, when the case was placed in the hands of the jury, who shortly after 6 o'clock returned a verdict of guilty, fixing the penalty at twelve years in the penitentiary.
